Plant signalling

RESEARCH CONTRIBUTION & ACHIEVEMENT

My research interest is focused plant signalling and development in response to environmental changes. This field required knowledge starting from seed development until plant development and how they can respond and adapt with the environmental changes including pathogen attack. Conducting research in this field will provide more information on factor affecting seed formation and germination and the mechanism on how the plant can respond and manipulate the defend mechanism in order to adapt the changes. The information provided from the research are beneficial in improving seed germination and plant growth rate.
